Purposes of Course

There are two main purposes to this course: (1) to learn about community development and (2) provide technical assistance to a community-based organization. We will focus our efforts on Corinthian Housing Development Corporation, a community development corporation in the West Side Park neighborhood in the Central Ward of Newark. We have worked with Corinthian and other organizations in the neighborhood for several years, sometimes through this studio, sometimes through CUPR's Community Outreach Partnership Center (COPC).

Project Description

Corinthian Housing Development Corporation has been working in the West Side Park neighborhood for about 10 years. Its focus has been primarily on housing development. More recently, it installed an advanced computer lab; it also offers a range of classes, including web design to residents and CBO/CDC staff. The organization is also involved in the revitalization of West Side Park, a 30-acre Olmsted-designed park in the heart of the West Side Park neighborhood.

Corinthian hopes to develop a health care center (jointly with another CDC). The new health care center may include retail space, offices, and space for neighborhood-oriented activities. Corinthian has asked the studio to prepare a market feasibility study for the health care center. They would like us to determine whether there is a need for a health care center in the neighborhood, how much it will cost to run a health care center, how the center should be structured, and how they can pay for it.

To answer these questions, studio participants will read literature on health care and community development, listen to in class presentations, travel to Newark, explore Internet sites, and participate in working groups to conduct project research. The five working groups are:

- ❑ Vision
- ❑ Models
- ❑ Market feasibility study
- ❑ Rental income
- ❑ Reimbursements (Medicare, Medicaid, NJ Family Care etc...)

Each group will develop work plans that will include project goals, research questions, methods, data sources, and time lines for research completion. They will conduct their research and develop a final report and presentation.

Course Materials

Many of the course materials have been reproduced and are available at Pequod Copy on Somerset Street. Other materials are available on-line. We have tried to point you to a variety of websites that will be useful to the project we will be working on and to general sites (associations, bibliographies, and the like).

We are also setting up a website that will soon be available. All materials developed by the class will be posted on that site. We will also establish a Listserv so that we can communicate easily.
